Academic Labor Research

Online Interview Space

Feature Documentary

Share Your Story

We invite you to share your story and reflect on how your current academic, social, and financial responsibilities and expectations have influenced how much or how little you work, and under what conditions and wages you do so. By exploring why students work and the effects of academic labor on the undergraduate experience, we hope to reveal the factors that have contributed to the indebted, underpaid, and overworked, yet often ignored and maligned, status of Millennial college students.

Participation

You will fill out an information sheet and do one or two videotaped interviews that can be posted online and used in a documentary film. You will have the option of sharing your experiences anonymously and the opportunity to review your footage after the interview. Our goal is to explore diverse backgrounds while offering a safe space for reflection. Your story matters.

IT IS TIME TO HEAR YOUR SIDE OF THE STORY
